All about the Folk

The 58th Annual Philadelphia Folk Festival is this weekend.

MOLLY GIVEN

This weekend, get ready to listen to an incredible lineup of live music for both kids and adults, indulge in enticing food, participate in hands-on crafts, watch talented stunt performers and partake in a once-in-a-lifetime camping experience at the 58th Annual Philadelphia Folk Festival.

The historic festival got its start in 1961 and is the longest continuously running outdoor music festival of its kind in North America. According to the website, the PFF is also the primary fundraising event for the Philadelphia Folksong Society (established 1957), which offers programs of presentation, participation and education throughout Greater Philadelphia and the nation. These programs present a cultural history of society and provide enjoyment to thousands of people of all ages while also preserving a vast variety of musical styles and historical perspectives. What also makes the Society unique is the fact that it's solely operated by 2,400 dedicated volunteers.

Both the Philadelphia Folksong Society and the Philadelphia Folk Festival have become well-known around the country — so much so that most people camp out for three or four days just to soak up every last minute of this colorful extravaganza.

One of the biggest draws of the PFF is the fact that this event is ideal for the whole family. There are live performers perfect for little tykes including puppeteers, jugglers, aerialists and storytellers, plus kid-oriented musicians performing in Dulcimer Grove, the "shady haven" at the Festival for children under the age of 12. As a bonus, children up to the age of 5 have free entry to the campgrounds and kids under the age of 11 will also be admitted into the concert area for free. Older kids (12 to 17) are eligible for the special "youth ticket," allowing them into the festival for half the regular gate price when accompanied by an adult.

For adults, there is just as much fun happening at the Philadelphia Folk Festival as there is for the kiddos. The 40-acre campground acts as a meeting place to mingle with new like-minded music friends, bond with your family and overall just experience the magic of the Festival under the blue and starry skies.

The 2019 Philadelphia Folk Festival lineup includes David Crosby & Friends, Margo Price, The Mavericks, Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Joan Osborne (singing the songs of Bob Dylan), Langhorne Slim and the Lost At Last Band, Amanda Shires, Kathy Mattea, Cha Wa, The Kruger Brothers and many, many more. The full lineup and the four-day schedule are available on the official website.

This annual event also features an impressive lineup of unique craft vendors including Dancing Hands Jewelry by Dean Wolfson, Finneran Jewelry by Kathrynn McDonald, Kaiya Naturals by Susan Stein, Ragtrader Vintage by Elisabeth Voltz, Spiral Dyes by Ken Ramsay, Southwest Expressions by Jose Farinango, Sunflower Trading Company by Frank Durantaye, Wayward Leather Design by Melanie Zellner and more. The PFF's goal with their unique assortment of craft vendors is to highlight the craftsmanship of traditional folk art while also highlighting the best artisans from other countries.

With all of these activities working up an appetite, the PFF has got you covered. The Festival features an enticing selection of vendors with cuisines ranging from Asian, Mexican, Greek, American, veggie, BBQ, fusion, local produce and more. If you're camping out, there will also be food available all day and night at select vendors and at Skippack Lion's Club located across from the campground headquarters.

The Philadelphia Folk Festival will take place from Aug. 15-18 at Old Pool Farm (1212 Barnbridge Dr., Collegeville). For more campground information, ticket prices and an overview of the sitemap, visit pfs.org.

Writer-director team Gene Stupinsky and Lee Eisenberg on letting 'Good Boys' be bad

The hilarious new comedy hits theaters this weekend. PAT KING

We hardly give kids the benefit of the doubt these days. In actuality, they probably have more of an understanding on what is going on than they may let on. The new film "Good Boys," out this weekend, explores that notion to such hilarious heights in one of the best surprise comedies of the summer.

The story follows three friends — Max, Lucas and Thor — played by actual young children Jacob Tremblay, Keith L. Williams and Brady Noon, respectively — who abandon school one day to go on an adventure to sell a valuable card from the popular Ascension card game in order to replace an expensive drone that the boys had accidentally destroyed. All the while, the boys are carrying drugs that they've mistakenly stolen from Max's next-door neighbor Hannah and her friend Lily, who are now chasing them across town.

The boys hope their plan goes off without a hitch before Max's father, played by Will Forte, gets home to see what they have done and, in turn, grounds them from going to their first "kissing party." Throughout their adventures, the boys drop F-bombs like they just heard the word for the first time and discuss things that are way over their heads with the sort of confidence that only kids that age could sensibly muster.

I caught up with Gene Stupinsky and Lee Eisenberg, who wrote and directed the film, to find out what it was like to coach such young children through some of the raunchy jokes they may not understand yet.

Part of what makes "Good Boys" so hysterical is seeing these three 12-year-old boys cursing up a storm and talking about things you would never expect. Do you think parents give children that age enough credit for what they actually know?

Gene Stupinsky: To be 12 is such a funny age. Your body is changing. Everything is just awkward. I just remember feeling awkward all the time. I was uncomfortable in my own skin. I think most 11- or 12-year-olds are.

Lee Eisenberg: I remember being in the car and driving home from karate with my mom and sister and just bursting out in tears for no reason. And my sister, who is younger, saying, "What's wrong with Lee?" And my mom whispering "hormones," and that made me cry even more because I couldn't control it.

Do you think the actors were too young to be fully "in on the jokes" of

GS: I don't think that they understand that their earnestness and awkwardness is what makes us laugh. I would say of the kids, maybe Brady, who plays Thor, was closest to see what the joke was. But they're just too young to understand what it is about them that makes them funny.
LE: I can't wait for them to see this movie in 10 years!

LE: The funniest was when they would improvise occasionally and they would say the exact same line and just throw in an F-word. They thought that's what we were looking for!

In a way, were they just seeing what they could get away with?
GS: They were definitely seeing what they could get away with. I think that's natural at that age. It's funny because they're so sweet off-camera. They're not walking around swearing but I think they really enjoyed the opportunity to swear. They knew that they couldn't get in trouble for talking like that.

The boys find themselves stumbling upon some pretty raunchy things throughout their adventures. Were there some subjects that you had to dance around while filming?
GS: Yeah. One time we were doing a scene with a sex doll and they were positioning the sex doll and her dress came up. The boys saw that the doll was, say, "anatomically correct." They immediately had questions and Steven Merchant, who was there, brilliantly said, "This is for doctors to practice on in medical school." And they bought that! It made sense to them. A lot of it was like, "Yeah, go ask your mom." We did not give them any information.

LE: We'd hang out with the kids, but it was not sex education [laughs].

While the film is full of hilarious moments, it also touches on the theme of growing past some of the first friends you have when you are a kid, when your interests begin to fall out of line with each other.
GS: We talked a lot about that age and when you start making choices on your own and your mom and your dad aren't saying, "Hey, you're going to hang out with these people because they live around the corner." You start kind of finding your way in the world a little bit more and you start announcing that you like karate or you like comic books or are into baseball. You start forging these bonds with the people that do what you do. I'm friends from when we were 6 or 7. But some of those people, we keep in touch because we have shared memories, and some of them it's because we're still interested in the same things.

'You're a better example to people if you've followed your dreams and your passions'

Actor Cate Blanchett and writer/director Richard Linklater on the set.

Writer-director Richard Linklater gives Metro the scoop on his latest film, "Where'd You Go, Bernadette."

MOLLY GIVEN

As human beings, we all have outlets that are necessary for our survival. Whether it's art, music, acting or writing, we all need something to throw our passions into and ultimately escape. So what happens when a creative person can't create anymore? Writer-director Richard Linklater's latest feature film, "Where'd You Go, Bernadette" (in theaters Aug. 16) explores just that.

"Where'd You Go, Bernadette" is based on the wildly popular 2012 novel by Maria Semple, and those who have read the book know just how intricate the story line is. Essentially, the pages are filled with letters, emails and notes instead of a formal narrative. That was Linklater's first challenge when taking on this project — finding a way to make the hilariously real correspondence into a film. "You just have to pick your spots," says Linklater. "The book is letters, emails, notes and it's just completely hilarious. So the idea here was to just take what it's about. It's funny and quirky, but it's also just straightforward storytelling. The audience is in a privileged spot where they always know what's going on even when the characters in the movie do not."

The story itself is quirky and eclectic, yet so relatable. It follows the story of once-famed architect Bernadette Fox, who shunned her creative outlet after a devastating mishap and moved to Seattle with her patient husband (Billy Crudup) and smartly charming daughter Bee (Emma Nelson). Bernadette deals with nosy neighbors (Kristin Wiig), conniving school moms (Zoe Chao), a Russian hacker, a ship full of Antarctic-bound passengers and more while on her journey of self-discovery.

The polarizing main character of Bernadette, played by Cate Blanchett, is not an easy nut to crack. Think of her as an enigma wrapped up in brilliance, a frosty attitude and thick sunglasses. But even though Bernadette would rather keep people — and the world, in general — out of her personal thoughts, there is still so much to unwrap. "There's just so much utter complexity to Bernadette. I initially was intrigued by how the story woven around her reveals itself. I thought about what the story meant to me — an artist who's not creating their art; long-term relationships; a portrait of a family; a mother and daughter relationship — all of that really resonated with me."

Richard Linklater with Kristin Wiig on set. ALL PHOTOS WILSON WEBB

Linklater is known for having his own directing style. He gathers his hand-picked cast together prior to filming to rehearse and get to know each other for about a month, which is quite uncommon in the film world. But to Linklater, it's simply what works to get the most out of the characters. "I want to work with artists, people who have points of view and have a lot of themselves to bring to something. I'm not interested in puppetry or someone doing exactly what I say," says Linklater. "I think the analogy is in the movie with Bernadette's approach to architecture: She's very instinctual and she says that she's a problem solver. I feel that way with every film. I'm given the personalities I'm working with and the cast that I've put together, so it's just kind of like, OK, what does this film want to be that exceeds my previous expectations? What new level can we reach? That's what I'm going for."

One of the main points of the film is the fact that Bernadette loses herself when she finds she no longer has that creative outlet she once held so close to her heart. As a filmmaker, Linklater related. "That's kind of the end of life for me: the day I stop wanting to create. I don't know what I would be doing without a creative outlet. Once you accept that about yourself and you realize your art is your own therapy — it's a deeper calling and it's personal."

"Where'd You Go, Bernadette" is heartwarming, heartwrenching, funny and real. But the real message stems from the innate desire we all have to be able to showcase our innermost wants, fears and pain through a creative outlet that is highly personal. "You're a better example to people if you've followed your dreams and your passions than if you sacrifice for others, even though that's an admirable quality," says Linklater. "On one hand, I think a good example is someone who's responsibly followed their passion and became the full person they're meant to be, instead of thwarting it for other people or other reasons. That's a hard balance. It's the challenge every adult faces and every parent faces to different degrees. Like for Bernadette, I think she's been focusing too much on other things and it's time for her to get back on track with herself. That's been the problem all along."

Kombucha: Natural probiotic

Produced from the fermentation of green, white or black tea, kombucha brings several health benefits. And it can be made at home! MWN

Refreshing, slightly carbonated, acidic and sweet. Created more than 2,000 years ago in China, kombucha has become a darling among the followers of a healthy diet because of its benefits. Food engineer Gislaine Santana, from Campo Largo, a company that manufactures kombucha, tells all about this probiotic drink.

What it is
Kombucha is a drink made mainly from sweetened Camellia sinensis tea — the most common are green, white or black tea — that is fermented by microorganisms that help the body function. It is produced with natural ingredients and without preservatives, and contains little sugar and low calorie content.

Benefits
Due to the natural fermentation process, kombucha has microorganisms and, therefore, its consumption can bring several health benefits. Among the most common reports are its aid in digestion, weight loss, antioxidant and anti-inflammatory actions, in addition to being a source of energy.

Bottled
It's nice to make kombucha at home, but you can also buy it. Try it — there are several options of the millenary drink in the market. You can choose the one that suits you the most and that suits your lifestyle.

How it's made
Kombucha is made from tea sweetened with sugar and fermented by a colony of bacteria and yeasts, known as scoby. Sugar acts as a food for microorganisms, causing them to multiply and start producing countless substances. Ask for scoby from those who already do it!

Flavor
Kombucha can be made with different ingredients and there are a variety of flavors available on the market. "The consumer must choose ingredients that are beneficial to health. There are several interesting and tasty combinations, such as: hibiscus and cranberry, lemon, matcha, ginger, mango and turmeric. They can also be presented with fruit flavors such as mango, apple and grape," says Gislaine.

Who can drink it
Because it is a fermented beverage and has a small percentage of alcohol, children and the elderly should consume it in a balanced way. Pregnant women, infants and people with chronic diseases should consult a doctor before drinking. Others should consume moderately, since, by stimulating the gastrointestinal system, it can cause discomfort.

Do it yourself
It is possible to prepare kombucha at home, as long as there are the necessary products for its preparation, such as scoby and a starter, as well as the basic ingredients (tea, sugar and something to give flavor, if desired, such as fruits and spices). "All products can be purchased on the internet or in a natural-products store, but be aware of the quality of scoby and other inputs to avoid risks of contamination.

Alcohol and sugar?
The drink takes a small amount of sugar and, because it is fermented, can also have a small percentage of alcohol (maximum 0.5 percent). For this reason, it is essential to store it correctly — so that these characteristics are maintained until the time of drinking.

READER WRITE-INS:

SOME THOUGHTS ON WOODSTOCK

Fifty summers ago, a half-million young people came together on a dairy farm in Bethel for three days of peace and music. When the sky opened and rain thundered down, when the sun baked the ground — and food, space and toilets were spare — they kept their collective cool. They helped each other right through to Monday morning, when Jimi Hendrix, the final performer, blessed the faithful with his grace and beautiful feedback. Then, many stayed to help clean up the mess.

What does it all mean, Mr. Natural?

It means that despite the trying conditions, some of today's senior citizens did what should come naturally to all humans: they rose to the occasion.

And so, whether or not you were there, dig the fact that we are sisters and brothers, and we can exceed our own expectations ... with a little help from our friends. It's not a hippie dream. Happy 50th anniversary, Woodstock Nation, and to you who have come after.

— Sylvia, Metro New York reader

Several Philadelphia police officers shot

The shooter appeared to have a high-powered weapon and a significant amount of ammunition.

Six Philadelphia police officers were shot and wounded on Wednesday in a shootout during a drug raid on a house and negotiators were urging the shooter to surrender as two officers remained trapped inside the home, police said.

Three hours into the standoff, Philadelphia Police said all of the wounded officers were in stable condition with non-life-threatening injuries.

Police were serving a drugs warrant at a North Philadelphia home at around 4:30 p.m. when the male shooter entered the house and opened fire on the officers.

"Many of them had to escape through windows and doors to escape from a barrage of bullets," Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross told a news conference.

The shooter continued to fire on a SWAT truck parked outside the residence in the Nicetown-Tiago neighborhood as officers tried to negotiate his surrender, Ross said.

Police called the man's phone, talked with him on a bullhorn and involved a family member in the negotiations, Ross added.

"I'm worried about a potential hostage situation and we've got to get that resolved," said Ross, adding that he believed the two officers trapped inside the home were not wounded.

> Philadelphia Police Commissioner Richard Ross

"We are trying to get him to come out peacefully," Ross said, declining to confirm whether there was more than one shooter. "There's no indication that he's trying to surrender, we do know that he is still alive, there's no question of that because of the shots that keep ringing out."

Police told local residents to remain inside their homes and stay out of the area after hundreds of rounds were exchanged.

Local television station Fox 29 reported some kind of movement by police at around 7:30 p.m., when a large bang was heard.

Two other officers were also injured in a car accident while responding to the shooting.

There were reports the shooter was livestreaming the incident on Facebook.

President Donald Trump was briefed on the shooting and was monitoring the situation, the White House said.

Local media reported the shooter appeared to have a high-powered weapon and a significant amount of ammunition. The incident follows a string of mass shootings in California, Texas and Ohio in which gunmen used semi-automatic rifles.

"I'm a little bit angry about someone having all that weaponry and all that firepower, but we'll get to that another day," said Philadelphia Mayor Jim Kenney after visiting three of the wounded officers in hospital. REUTERS

A$AP Rocky found guilty of Stockholm brawl

U.S. rapper A$AP Rocky was convicted in Sweden on Wednesday of assault over a Stockholm street brawl, but spared time in jail after a high-profile trial that had led President Donald Trump to accuse Sweden of treating him unfairly.

A$AP Rocky, whose real name is Rakim Mayers, and two members of his entourage were found guilty of kicking and beating 19-year-old Mustafa Jafari after an argument. But the court said allegations they hit him with a glass bottle, which might have brought a tougher sentence, were not proven.

"In an overall assessment, the court finds that the assault has not been of such a serious nature that a prison sentence must be chosen," Senior Judge Per Lennerbrant told a courtroom packed with reporters.

The rapper, who shot to fame with his 2011 debut "Live.Love.A$AP," was not in court for the verdict. He was released on Aug. 2 after 31 days in jail and a three-day trial, in what legal experts said at the time was a sign the judge was likely not to jail him further.

A$AP Rocky. REUTERS

The court said the fact that the defendants had no prior convictions over the past five years and had already spent time in custody awaiting trial meant they would not serve further time in prison or pay any fine.

Prosecutor Daniel Suneson told Reuters he had not yet decided whether he would appeal any part of the verdict.

"The court has been of the same view as myself, with one big exception, which is whether or not a blow was dealt with a glass bottle," he said. "Beyond that I feel the court made an accurate assessment."

Slobodan Jovicic, Mayers' Swedish lawyer, told reporters he was disappointed in the conviction but said the court had ruled in favor of his client regarding some aspects of the case.

"We didn't succeed all the way, but on the other hand we got many points proven," he said, adding that he had contacted his client about the verdict via text message and would speak to him later on Wednesday.

SELF-DEFENSE

The case drew global attention, particularly after Trump offered to vouch for the rapper's bail and asked Swedish Prime Minister Stefan Lofven to help free him. Sweden does not have a bail system and Lofven pointed to Sweden's independent judiciary, saying he could not intervene.

Trump tweeted messages saying he was disappointed in Lofven and demanding: "Treat Americans fairly!" REUTERS

Jeffrey Epstein accuser sues financier's estate, as prison officials probe suicide

Accuser Jennifer Araoz said she was just 14 when Epstein's sexual abuse began.

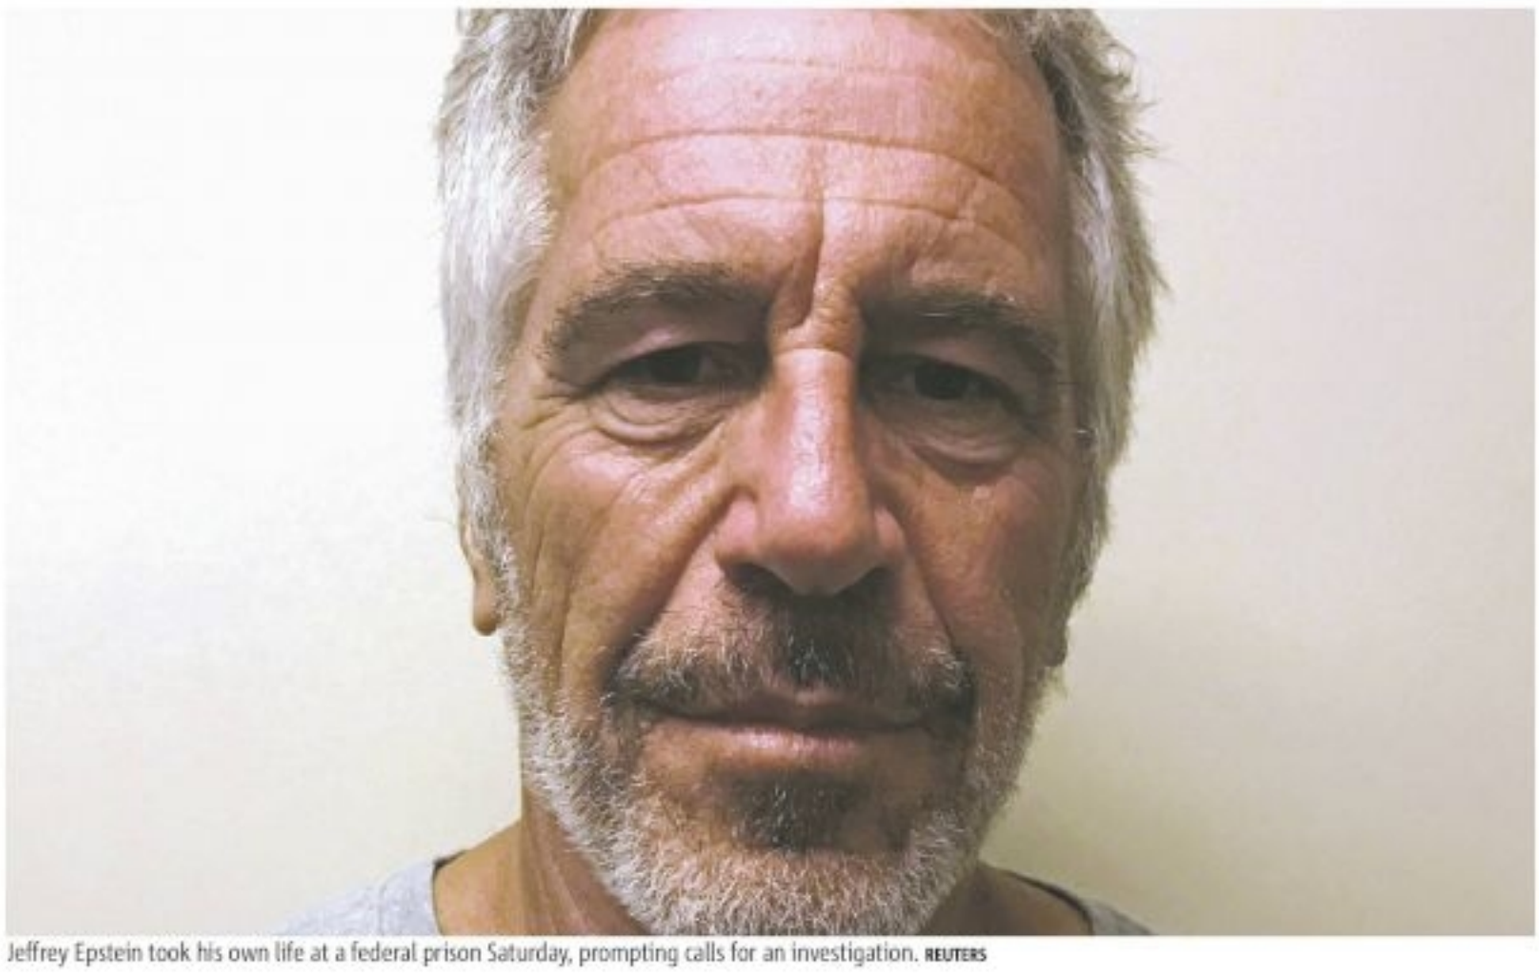
A New York woman who said she was sexually assaulted by Jeffrey Epstein at the age of 14 sued the disgraced financier's estate and a former associate on Wednesday, as prison officials began an internal review of how Epstein died in an apparent suicide last week.

In the first of an expected wave of lawsuits, Jennifer Araoz, 32, said she had just entered high school in 2001 when an Epstein associate brought her to the financier's mansion on Manhattan's Upper East Side, beginning a grooming process that led to months of sexual abuse including a "brutal rape."

The lawsuit in New York County Supreme Court is among the first of a series by women made possible by the state's Child Victims Act, which opened a one-year window to sue over alleged sexual abuse regardless of how long ago it occurred.

Epstein, who once counted Republican President Donald Trump and Democratic former President Bill Clinton as friends, was found unresponsive in his cell on Saturday morning at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Lower Manhattan, according to the Federal Bureau of Prisons. A source said the well-connected money manager was found hanging by the neck.

Psychologists began on Tuesday studying how the suicide took place, according to a person familiar with the matter, reflecting Federal Bureau of Prisons' policy calling for a "psychological reconstruction" following a suicide.



Jeffrey Epstein took his own life at a federal prison Saturday, prompting calls for an investigation. REUTERS

Another team at the MCC on Wednesday began an "after action" review, which is normally triggered by significant events such as the death of a high-profile inmate, the person familiar with the matter said. That review will be headed by a Bureau of Prisons director from another region.

The reviews are separate from investigations by the FBI and U.S. Department of Justice's inspector general and Jack Donson, a former Bureau of Prisons corrections case manager, said the Bureau of Prisons would probably "take care of business this week."

Epstein had been arrested on July 6 and pleaded not guilty to charges of sex trafficking involving dozens of underage girls between 2002 and 2005. Prosecutors said he recruited girls to give him massages, which became sexual in nature.

Araoz's lawsuit says former Epstein associate Ghislaine Maxwell facilitated Epstein's abuse of several girls by overseeing their recruitment and "ensuring that approximately three girls a day were made available to him for his sexual pleasure."

A lawyer who had represented Epstein did not immediately respond to requests for comment. Lawyers for Maxwell did not immediately respond to similar requests.

The other three unnamed defendants in Araoz's lawsuit — all women who allegedly worked for Epstein in New York — are a maid, a secretary and a "recruiter" who helped procure underage girls for him.

Araoz told reporters on a conference call she was angry that Epstein's death meant he would never face her in court but wanted to exercise her legal rights in civil court. REUTERS

Giant Food Store to open flagship store in Center City

Giant Food Stores is living up to its name with new plans to open a sprawling two-level flagship store in Center City.

Inquirer.com reported that the new shop will open in a 65,000-square-foot location in the River Walk property. The store address is 60 N. 23rd St. and will be located in Riverwalk Tower 1.

The store is expected to open in Fall 2020 and create over 200 new jobs. There will also be free on-site parking, according to The Inquirer.

The grocery chain has over 180 stores throughout Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland, with 158 located in Pennsylvania.

The flagship spot in Center City will reportedly have an outdoor terrace, so shoppers can eat their purchased food — and even drink alcohol — on-site.

GETTY IMAGES

Nicholas Bertram, the company's president, said in an interview that the terrace will be a public space; however, it will be possible for locals to book the space for events. There is also possibility for live events as well, including live music.

The new store will also have its own "Marty," a gray robot that will assist staff by looking for hazards, such as broken glass. The robot is reportedly 6 feet 5 inches and weighs around 130 pounds.

Last year, Giant unveiled its plan for Giant Heirloom Markets, an urban store concept selling specialty foods. They currently have two locations in Philly, one at 2303 Bainbridge St. and one at 3401 Chestnut St. Two more are expected to open this year.

The flagship will be inspired by the Heirloom Market and will have local vendors. Customers will be able to order their groceries online and pick them up in-store or get them delivered to their homes.

This flagship also promises to keep plant-based customers happy by offering the largest plant-based department in stores. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Matt Burke is a veteran sports journalist and the Founder and Editor in Chief of MetroBet.

Smart bettors — and frankly those who just like money — will take advantage of all of the risk-free betting cash that's out there right now ahead of the start of the NFL and college football seasons. You're likely already familiar with receiving deposit matches, but now MetroBet is doubling down on giving you extra green in your wallet!

MetroBet will give out free $50 VISA e-gift cards to the first 1,000 people who open an account at MetroBet.us/Sugar !

There's no catch here, all you have to do is open an account, make a deposit (where you'll still get a free deposit match), and bet on at least one game. Literally free money!

Here are the three easy steps:

1. Go to MetroBet.us/Sugar and enter promo code: METROBET

2. Make a deposit and wager a minimum of $25

3. Fill out an easy online form to receive your $50 VISA e-gift card. The form is available here: tinyurl.com/y2nfccj6 and at MetroBet.us under the promotions tab.

We expect these free gift cards to go quickly and this promotion is limited to the first 1,000 sign-ups, so act fast! Make tonight's Eagles–Jaguars game interesting!

Example

Here is an example of how the offer at MetroBet.us/Sugar could work for you.

If you deposited $100, PlaySugarHouse would match that with $100 and you would instantly have $200 to play with.

Let's say you then bet $25 on the Eagles to cover the +3 spread tonight, and they did so, you would instantly have $225 in your account.

On top of that, MetroBet would then send you the $50 VISA gift card — meaning you basically made the easiest $175 of your life!

Offer terms

The offer is not available to a player who has or has previously had an account with www.playsugarhouse.com. New users only.

Once your email address has been matched and verified by PlaySugarHouse, MetroBET will email the player a $50 VISA e-gift card within four weeks of form submission. You may only participate in this promotion once.

For full offer terms, go to MetroBet.us.

Just spent some quality minutes with Nick Foles. One of the things I asked him was why he's now wearing number 7 instead of 9 his response: "Number 9 stays in Philadelphia. That number means a lot to me. It pertains to that city."

Eagles vs. Jaguars betting preview

A juicy Carson Wentz vs. Nick Foles matchup likely isn't happening Thursday in Jacksonville. Instead we'll get the tag team of Cody Kessler and Clayton Thorson facing off against Gardner Minshew and Alex McGough for the brunt of the game.

As we discussed last week in this spot, betting on preseason football can be tricky. But then again, putting a couple of bucks on it also gives you incentive to watch the whole game.

At least in Week 2 of the preseason, we have a little something to fall back on. Both the Eagles and Jags had ugly outings in the first week of the preseason, as the Birds fell to the Titans, 27-10, and the Ravens blasted the Jags, 29-0. Look for the Eagles D to be able to get to both Minshew and McGough in this one as both players were running for their lives last week against Baltimore. The Jags allowed four sacks and completed just 10 passes in that one.

GETTY IMAGES

Aside from the QBs, most of the players playing in Week 1 of the regular season for both teams will be seeing significant action. And the Jaguars have a ton to prove coming off of last season's 5-win campaign, and last week's embarrassing shutout loss. Look for the Jags to show up.

From fantasy to dream team:
METRO'S 2019 GUIDE TO FANTASY FOOTBALL

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Break out those notes, your weird trophies, ridiculous superstitions and most importantly, your draft boards.

Fantasy Football season is upon us, allowing all of us to act as general managers while getting irrationally angry at small-market games that none of us care about here on the East Coast. You know, something like Cardinals, 49ers.

We all have that one friend who is losing his or her collective mind because George Kittle isn't getting enough targets.

If you don't know who George Kittle is, you will shortly.

August is prime time for Fantasy Football drafts around the world, annually pitting friends, colleagues, and closet enemies against each other in a virtual game that has no bearing on the actual NFL season.

Yet Fantasy Football has continued to grow America's most popular sport even more as team owners will tune into almost any game as long as their players are in action.

With bragging rights — and a lot of money — on the line in most of your leagues, Metro is here to help you lift that gold-painted colander you call a trophy and ensure your 2019 Fantasy Football season is a success.

Over the next few pages, we'll take a look at the top fantasy players at every position, the top sleepers, busts, and how to properly select your team come draft day.

Happy drafting!

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A QB?

Don't draft a quarterback earlier than the fourth round. There is always going to be that one team that panics and takes a quarterback early.

RESIST THE URGE.

The difference between the top QB and the 20th-ranked passer in average-fantasy-points-per-game last year was around 3.5. That's not going to destroy your hopes if you draft correctly.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT AN RB?

Take running backs early and often. These are playmakers that will get 20 to 30 touches per game and will have ample opportunities to put up big scores.

Try to take a dual-threat back like Saquon Barkley, Alvin Kamara, or Le'Veon Bell. These are gifted pass catchers who are going to see a ton of the ball in 2019.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A WR?

WRs can rack up big scores if they play in a pass-happy offense. Keep an eye on how many targets a pass catcher is projected to have this year.

The more targets, the better the chance is of big plays. Make sure to take note of TD poachers, as well. Big-bodied receivers are jump-ball threats in the end zone to boost your score quickly.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A TE?

The only time it's acceptable to draft a tight end earlier on in the draft is if it's Travis Kelce, Zach Ertz or George Kittle. They are treated like wide receivers and will put up similar fantasy scores.

If those three aren't available, wait until you address your running backs, wide receivers, and your quarterback.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT MY DEFENSE/SPECIAL TEAMS?

Wait to draft a defense as one of your final selections in your draft. Defenses rarely put up monumental weeks that will tip the scales.

In fact, most of them put up eerily similar scores.

Last year, the average scores per week between the top-ranked defense (the Bears) and the 17th-ranked defense was approximately four points.

WHEN SHOULD I DRAFT A KICKER?

With your last possible pick.

Don't be that guy who takes Justin Tucker in the fourth round. You'll be ridiculed forever and deserve to finish last from now until 2045.

WHAT DOES A NORMAL STARTING LINEUP LOOK LIKE?

2- RB
